

The Allergy Team: helping families living with food allergies to thrive

Managing Food Allergies in School A transformative course for staff from The Allergy Team

Wellbeing and inclusion

Young people with food allergies can experience anxiety and poor mental health. Experts, including a clinical psychologist, will help staff promote inclusion and support students' wellbeing, giving them the confidence to thrive.

Expert knowledge at an affordable price

Bite-sized modules created by allergy parents, top medical experts, education professionals and catering staff. With a fixed price per school, every member of staff will have access to this online resource, ensuring a whole-school approach.

Supporting school life

Junk modelling, science experiments, Easter chicks, school trips and PTA events – we cover the risks and offer simple solutions, ensuring all pupils get the most out of their education.

Pupil safety

20% of severe allergic reactions happen at school. Our course will equip staff to respond to this potentially life-threatening medical emergency. We show how to develop a robust allergy policy, manage vital medication and create individual management plans.

Confidence building

Staff will become allergy aware and confident, enabling strong relationships with pupils and their families, who are relying on schools to keep them safe.
